copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

Let's make the state fair a state affair.

Another "garage burned up." Barre will soon have a garage which can't, positively can't, burn.

Gov. Bell's hosts of friends hope that his illness of Sunday was only slight and that he will be fully restored to health.

Boys are flying with the aid of kites. The problems of aerial transportation are surely getting simplified, and the Wrights and Bleriot are losing their grip on the mystery.

The reawakened claim that Mary Baker Eddy is dead and that a hoax is being perpetrated on the public by those in charge of the "house of mystery" at Brookline, Mass., recalls that mortals must die sometime.

The meagre stories which Peary tells and which he allows his company to tell are evidently intended to excite the public to hear the remainder, either from Peary's own lips or the paid lecture platform or through dollar-a-word magazine articles. The members of the Peary expedition appear to be completely under the famous explorer's thumb.

The Rutland Herald inclines to the belief that its townsman, John A. Mead, leads in the gubernatorial canvass in Vermont, but admits that his strength is "quite likely to crumble" unless bolstered up, and that "there is no special enthusiasm." In short, The Herald would have us to understand that there is little organization back of the Mead movement. We fail to discern any particular enthusiasm in The Herald's support, either. Other reports from Rutland county state that Mead has by no means got even the well wishes of his home county, to say nothing of the votes.

Burlington is peculiarly indebted to many of its private citizens for the beauty which makes the city attractive to live in and to visit; these citizens have laid out considerable money to preserve and enhance the gifts of nature and they have made what really amounts to public parks in the surrounding territory. The late Edward P. Hatch, a New York merchant, was one of these citizens, and "Red Rocks," one of the show places of Burlington, was his property and was, by his generosity, opened to the public as long as the public did not abuse the privileges. Henry Holt's estate on the top of College hill is another. Webb's property at Shelburne is another. Then there are lesser estates which, while perhaps not open to the public, add much to the city's appearance. Such a man as Edward P. Hatch helped Burlington wonderfully and, as the Burlington News states, will be "greatly missed."

Apple culture in New England will receive a boom through the New England apple show which will be held in Boston next month. That the apple is destined to be one of the strongest assets of the farmer hereabouts has been demonstrated by actual figures from a Charlotte apple grower this fall. The initial cost, as the Boston Transcript says, is the great hindrance to branching out into this side of agricultural industries; but the contemporary points out that "almost any man can make some progress each year at very small expense and in the end find himself possessed of a source of income that will surprise as well as please him. Probably at the present time the same money and care that are put into dairying, if applied to apple culture would give much larger returns. But success will not attend a go-as-you-please policy. The varieties to be grown, the fertilizers to apply, the protection to be given, call for the exercise of sound judgment."

HOW BARRE GROWS.

The Barre board of trade has accepted a style of advertising stationery, some features of which are worth remembering and telling to people who are not acquainted with this municipality. Some of the figures showing the growth of the city in nine years are here appended:

	1900.	1909.
Population	8,448	13,000*
City debt	$193,250	$87,300
Assessed valuation, 1909, $2,177,874.00
Value of manufactures	$2,600,000	$4,485,000
Taxable polls	2,318	3,261
Granite workers	1,220	2,360
School children	2,080	2,750

* Estimated.
Perhaps the most striking feature of the above comparison is the increase of the manufactured granite. In less than ten years the product had all but doubled, while there are nearly twice as many granite workers now as there were in 1900 in this city, without counting the thousands engaged at the quarries.

This development has been so steady that the community scarcely realizes what changes are taking place from year to year. Hence the need to impress upon them from time to time the fact that Barre is constantly expanding. The above figures will serve also to give a good account of the city to those who may be looking for new locations. Spread them.

CURRENT COMMENT

Don't Blame Us.

The difference between the telephone company and Barre and Montpelier are far from settled. The boards of trade of the two cities refuse the proposition lately made by the telephone company on the ground that it did not align with the social understanding reached in a conference between the conflicting interests. Barre and Montpelier insist on their demand for a return to the former telephone rates and for a rebate on the bills paid since the advance in rates on July 1. The claims of the two organizations seem to an outsider to be entirely just.—Rutland News.

Fleetwood's Candidacy.

F. G. Fleetwood of Morrisville has announced his candidacy for governor. In a straightforward letter to the press he states his position as a farmer. There is no beating about the bush or maneuvering to lure about a "spontaneous demand" for his candidacy. He says he will spend no money to get the office and that he will discuss public questions before the people, candidly placing himself before the voters on the merits of the issues he champions. Those who are acquainted with, and personally know Mr. Fleetwood, and they are numerous, know he will make good.

Mr. Fleetwood is a young man, known as among the younger element of the Republican party. He has held the office of secretary of state through three administrations with distinguished honor and has been an honest faithful public servant.

The announcement of his candidacy coming as it does, is a decided change from the methods usually adopted, and it is a hopeful sign for cleaner and better politics.

The Times is glad to know Mr. Fleetwood is a candidate for governor. He will inject a good wholesome lot of enthusiasm into the campaign, and make a clean and strong run for the governorship, and give the voters something to think about.—Groton Times.

Vermont in the Census.

The census director may figure that no more than the same number of enumerators employed in the census in Vermont in 1910, but they will find a good many more people to count here next year than we had ten years ago, a good many for Vermont, that is to say. The population in 1900 was 243,641 as against 332,423 in 1900, a gain of 11,219, or a trifle over 4 1/2 per cent.

The Messenger would not be surprised to see the figures of 1910 go as high as 305,000, a gain of 21,359 although, of course, this would be a big jump for this steady going little state. But there has been a very healthy growth in our industrial life in the past ten years and many of the reasons why in former times young men were induced to leave the state to seek better opportunities elsewhere have been made less persuasive not to say less compelling by the development of opportunities right here at home where they never existed before.

Of course, any jump at the figures of 1910 would be sheer guesswork, but 305,000 would be a gain of only 6 per cent over the population of 1900, and several towns in the state will be able to show more than that. Of course, there must be reckoned in this fact that some of the smaller towns will undoubtedly show losses, although these losses are largely due to nearly every town and are not lost to the state as a whole.

The population of Vermont by decades from the first census to that of 1900 was as follows: (1790), 85,449; (1800), 154,465; (1810), 217,895; (1820), 235,066; (1830), 280,632; (1840), 291,948; (1850), 314,120; (1860), 315,038; (1870), 330,551; (1880), 332,284; (1890), 333,423; (1900), 343,641. A gain of 21,359 shows by the figures of 1910, therefore, would mean the greatest increase in any decade since 1830.—St. Albans Messenger.

For Governor, Frederick G. Fleetwood.

The formal announcement of the candidacy of our townsman, Frederick G. Fleetwood for governor has been received with great favor by the people and press of the state. It was not expected that all would approve of it, but the majority of the state press has been very kind and he has received hundreds of letters from the people, from leading Republicans, etc. in all parts of the state assuring him of their support.

His platform has appealed to the people who are heartily tired of the old methods of fixing the nomination for this important office days and weeks and months before the formal announcement of any candidate. The people like a modern way, in which the candidates appeal direct to the people in ample season for the voters to consider their merits and compare their qualifications with those of others who aspire to this high office. Mr. Fleetwood has recognized the wishes of the people and it is now up to the voters to say whether they prefer him to some other candidate.

Other candidates, who have been industriously pursuing the prize with old methods, and leaving the people out of the preliminary canvass, will have to come out into the open now.

The few unfavorable comments come from papers that have been seen and introduced in the road old way.

Mr. Fleetwood has hired no managers, has no press bureau, has no "hired men" traveling up and down the state, ostensibly in the interest of some other business, to see and engage the wire-pullers, the men who claim to control the delegates and politics of their towns. He has no money to spend in this way and would not spend it were he worth a million.

That he is qualified by education, natural ability and experience in statecraft all must admit. His record is an open book that all can read and compare with that of other candidates.—Morrisville Messenger.

JINGLES AND JESTS

An Urban Visitor.

The countryside is fine and wide,
As poets oft have raved,
But seldom hath
A rustic path
That's adequately paved.

The vagrant breeze
Among the trees
Is very nice, I guess,
But will it blow
Exactly so
When you a button press

I like to look
Into the brook
Or loaf upon its brink,
But miss, alas,
The polished glass
Wherein the ice doth clink.

I'd not deride
The countryside,
Nor rub it of its bays.
The fault is mine
For I incline
Too much to city ways.

She Lost Out.

"I'd rather wait than eat," confided the summer girl.
"Then we'll have another dance instead of going to that fashionable restaurant," remarked the chivalrous waiter.
"And," he added mentally, "that's $6 saved."—Kansas City Journal.
